

Diagram 1.1

Tools for recruiting a cancer planning group

Levels of involvement of government and NGOs in the cancer planning process

The diagram below illustrates several important points regarding the respective roles of NGOs and the national government in national cancer planning. It is rare that either only the government or only NGOs engage in national cancer planning. In most cases, there will be some level of involvement of both in the planning process. At left, the diagram shows that when NGOs are very heavily involved in national cancer planning, the government may play a much smaller role. At the right, the diagram illustrates the opposite. The middle of the diagram shows that in some cases, government and NGOs are equally involved in the planning effort.

At the beginning of the national cancer planning process, each country should assess the respective level of involvement by NGOs and government and set expectations accordingly.

← Relative involvement in national cancer planning →

Guidance For Comprehensive Cancer Control Planning, volume 2: toolkit. See: Tool #14b in Planning Partner Surveys (Utah Comprehensive Cancer Control Organizational Interest Questionnaire). Division of Cancer Prevention and Control Centers for Disease Control and Prevention, Atlanta, 2002, pages 42-44. <http://www.cdc.gov/cancer/ncccp/>